Rafoul, the slik weaver, of 17 Rector street, fell in love with the popular Syrian girl who worked in the embroidery shop near by, and all the colony knew their love and watched with interest the romance. Najeeba lived with her brother-in-law, Elias, in the tenement at 21 Washington street, and was happy in the vision of an approaching wedding to Rafoul. He was a frequent caller at their tidy apartment high above the Tropical Forest Is Shows.

Where once the Biltmore's grand ballroom and surrounding dining and supper rooms and foyers had had walls and pollars and pilasters and balconies it now had nothing to show except a forest of green which had something on any

Girl Claims the Pistol.

Policeman Dennis McCarthy of the Greenwich street station said he saw McCarthy grabbed her as she held it, and es some one wrenched it from her hand doors. So did the great deteckatuff. Mr. McCarthy said she claimed it as one Care energy as unostentationsly as carthy grabbed her as she held it, and as some one wrenched it from her hand McCarthy said she claimed it as one which she had bought lest Rafoul attack her again. Other witnesses testified in the station house that the girl came along after the shooting in the chop and meeting her brother-in-law asked him if he had shot Rafoul. The District Attorney did not believe all of Najeeba's story in the light of what other witnesses said and in spite of Elias's statement that he did not shoot himself, that he did not know who did it, that he happened by at the time and was there when the police came.

Rafoul did not recover consciousness to tell his side of the story, but no one could be found in the excited Syrian colony yesterday afternoon to say aught but a word of sympathy for the sad eyed girl of the embroidery factory. Rafoul died nine hours after the shooting and Elias and his sister-in-law were held on a charge of felonious assault. They will be arraigned in the Tombs court to-day or to-morrow.

The tales of witnesses questioned by the Assistant District Attorney say Elias did the shooting that followed, but Najeeba took unto herself the deed and claimed the pistol as her own. Anyhow, Rafoul must have divined his fate, for he darted toward the entrance to George Shaloupe's shop as a bullet cracked the glass. He gained the interior, with Elias and Najeeba in pursuit. Rafoul retreated to the kitchen in the rear and tried the door to the backyard. It was locked, and Elias and Najeeba were coming in the front door.
